Paper, glue, straws and lolly sticks...

All help Tops Day Nursery children create their own Poppies and collect donations for the Royal British Legion

In preparation for Remembrance Day children at Tops Day Nursery in Poole made their own poppies for the parents and visitors to wear. Their brightly coloured poppies were created with hand prints and tissue paper attached to straws and lolly sticks and were on display in the Nursery for people to buy. All donations go to the Royal British Legion

Nursery manager Paula Garrett's father, brother and son have all been in the army. Her brother was in the Royal Hussiers for 22 years and her son, aged 25 is a 1st class medic stationed at Guildford who turned to the medical field after losing friends in war.

Paula says: "It is important for the children to learn about the Poppy Appeal and for us all to remember the war. Our nursery location, near to Hamworthy Marines means that quite a few parents come from the Marine camp and the poppies the children have made and displayed are a sign of respect to them. Anyone can come to the nursery on Denmark lane for one of our poppies and to make a donation."
